

Re-Orienting Whiteness

Conference: Melbourne, 3-5 December 2008

Keynote Speakers:

Ann Laura Stoler, New School for Social Research

Aileen Moreton-Robinson, Queensland University of Technology

Lynette Russell, Monash University

Patrick Wolfe, La Trobe University

Matt Wray, Harvard University

Featuring a Public Forum: 'After the Apology: Perspectives from Indigenous Speakers'

Following the success of the Historicising Whiteness conference of 2006, Re-Orienting Whiteness continues the critical engagement with whiteness studies and invites scholars to explore the potential, or otherwise, of 'whiteness' to analyse the operations of 'race', past and present.

Our central aim is to bring whiteness studies into a closer conversation with other approaches to 'race', particularly those which have emerged from studies of colonialism and postcolonial theory. There has been remarkably little cross fertilisation between these areas of scholarship, despite the many obvious synergies between them. We envision the conference traversing a variety of countries, periods, methodologies and theoretical concepts, bringing together scholars of diverse backgrounds and interests. Broadening out from the (settler colonial) context of the United States, we wish to explore how whiteness operated in colonial and non-colonial contexts across the globe.

Possible themes include:

Indigenous perspectives on whiteness

The politics of apology/assimilation/sovereignty/restitution/power

Whiteness in the colonial/settler colonial encounter

Whiteness in non-colonial contexts

The gendered privileges of whiteness

The chronology of whiteness: visibility/invisibility

Cultures, representations, borderlands, bodies, transformations

Refugees, asylum, immigration, inclusion/exclusion

Does whiteness even matter?
